Health and safety: risk management

The IOSH logo

Our logo is an important part of our identity, and we carefully control how it's used. We need to make sure that the logo is reproduced only in the right context as well as in the right format and style, whatever the medium.

The IOSH logo, the IOSH acronym and other elements of our corporate identity are trademarked and protected under copyright law.

Who can use the IOSH logo?

Partners

For example:

- Collaborators in a project we're formally involved in
- Organisers of events that we're sponsoring or are officially associated with
- Approved trainers

Who can't use the IOSH logo?

Individual members

The logo represents IOSH as a corporate body, regulated by a formal governance structure and incorporated by Royal Charter. It's therefore not appropriate for members to use the logo on an individual basis.

Members shouldn't use the logo on stationery (including business cards), websites or other business and communication materials. Members are, however, encouraged to use their post-nominal letters and state their full IOSH membership category where relevant.

People who have been on an IOSH training course

Taking part in one of our Professional Development or employee training courses doesn't mean that you're allowed to use the IOSH logo.

If you'd like permission to use the logo, please get in touch so that we can confirm this and instruct you on how to use the logo correctly. We'll also need to make sure that the IOSH logo isn't going to be used to imply a broad or generic association with us.

Read our Logo guidelines (PDF 19 KB) for more information on who can use our logo.
